

BURGLARS FLEE, LEAVING BEHIND $10,000 IN FURS

Cut Hole Through Eight
Inch Wall to Dodge
Burglar Alarm.

Thieves broke into the four-story building at No. 25 West Nineteenth street last night and to avoid a door which was a burglar alarm they cut their way through an eight-inch wall into S. Herbst's furrier's establishment. They were making off with furs valued at $10,000 when the police came upon them, and then they took to their heels and are believed to have escaped over the roof.

The thieves gained entrance to the house through Trans' Restaurant, on the ground floor. There was a sign on the restaurant that attracted them, but finding a secret door leading to the hallway they went to the floor above. This second floor is occupied by Samuel D. Reib's cloak manufactory. Efforts were made to force the door, but it resisted the attempts of the thieves and they went to the floor above, occupied by the furrier. The front of this door showed that it was wired with the burglar alarm system, and the burglars attacked the wall. A hole, eight and one-half inches wide and nineteen inches long was cut in the wall. This hole is hardly big enough to admit the body of a boy, and the police suspect that either a small man or a boy was with the thieves and that he got through the small opening.

Only the most valuable furs in the place were taken. They were stored out the hole and put in sacks. When four sacks were full they were carried to the restaurant. About dawn Policeman Murphy of the West Twelfth street station happened along. Trying the door of the restaurant he found it open and then came upon the four sacks. At first he believed the sacks contained the laundry from the restaurant, but close examination showed a new brace and bit and a jimmy on one of the sacks. Rapping his stick Murphy called a number of other policemen. The block was surrounded, but too late. The thieves had gone. They are believed to have taken flight at the approach of the policemen and when he rapped for assistance to have made for the roof.

QUARANTINE TIES UP POLICE HORSES

Flushing Mounted Men Defied
It Until Threatened with Arrest.

In a row between the Board of Health and the Police Department most of the fine driving horses of Flushing have been tied up in the quarantine of two stables.

The Police Department kept all of the horses attached to the Flushing Precinct in the Monument House stables until last night. A few days ago one of the police horses developed a contagious disease known as "flu" which is similar to the disease in humans. The disease communicated to two other police horses and one of them was shut after the other two died.

The Health Department then quarantined the stable and ordered that none of the horses then there or any of the harness or anything else in the stable be taken out until the quarantine was officially raised. Besides quarantining the police horses the order tied up about twenty driving horses belonging to families and individuals.

Headless of the quarantine the police last night removed their eight horses, with the police and the city's stables, and the mounted men's equipment to the Flushing House stables and the mounted men went out on patrol as usual.

When the Health Department heard of this it also quarantined the stable to which the police had moved, thus tying up a dozen other horses, not by citizens, and threatened to cause the arrest of the policemen who were also who took anything from either of the stables.

The result is that Flushing has no mounted police today and the patrolmen have extra horse posts to tramp by foot. Both stables Minister Clark and the Board of Health expect to raise the quarantine by the end of the week.

"HATPIN MINNIE" BUSY.

Tries to Find Sergeant After Getting New Six Months' Sentence.

Minnie Kelly, familiarly known as "Hatpin Minnie," ended a six months' sentence in the "Island" yesterday, and celebrated so thoroughly that she was in the court today, charged with intoxication. Magistrate Cornell gave her another six months to add to her five year record.

As she was being led away she broke loose from the policeman and made a vicious stab at Sergeant Casey of the Court Squad, with a hatpin. The sergeant dodged and Minnie took it out of him in the end and imprecations as she was led back to the prison screaming and fighting all the way. Two years ago she attempted to stab Magistrate Venable with a hatpin after he had imposed a six months' sentence on her.

BLOODGOOD CUTTER, FARMER POET, DEAD

Picturesque Old Character of Long Island Expires in Ninetieth Year.

Bloodgood H. Cutter, farmer poet of Long Island, died today in his old farm house at Great Neck, where he had spent the greater part of his life.

For the last month the farmer poet has been ill, after an accident which happened while he was celebrating his eighty-ninth birthday on Aug. 5 last. Passing through a swinging gate in the rear of his home the old man did not realize that he was feeble and the gate came shut with such force that it knocked him down.

For a few days he thought little of the accident, but pain drove him to his bed, and he has been unable to be about since. Some days ago it became evident that the old man had written his last poem, and that he was on his death bed. Dr. Zaway, of Great Neck, his regular physician, called Dr. Storey, of Bayville, into consultation yesterday. The old man was even then breathing his last. The two physicians were at his bedside when he died. With him were Miss Munro, his faithful housekeeper, and his nephew, William Purchase.

With the death of the farmer-poet the people of Great Neck are much interested in what will become of his estate, which is variously estimated at from $100,000 to $150,000. Mr. Cutter got his start in life from his father, who admired his ability to make verse, and who cut off his other children to give his post and a competency.

The poet was a most practical man when it came to business and he was shrewd. He invested his money carefully in Long Island real estate and Wall Street.

Mr. Cutter's wife, who was Emily Allen, died a number of years ago and left no children. All through her life-time and after her death the poet wrote all poems and things his opinion of them in verse, and often these opinions were cutting. When Mr. Cutter died his verses up to the date of his death and his last poem, "The Death of the Poet," were found in his study. When Mr. Cutter celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday he wrote an ode to himself which went something like this:

"Bloodgood Cutter is eighty-eight;
Obeying God and defying fate,
His age goes up and won't go down."
Mr. Cutter was an elderly man, with a long white beard, and a few white hairs on his head. On one occasion he took up arms and verse against the Meadow Brook Hunt Club. His last poem, "The Death of the Poet," was a satire on the members of the club who did not like what the poet had to say about them in verse, but no one made any objections in person. Mr. Cutter was a most devoted churchman and a generous contributor.

TRYING TO PAWN, GOT ARRESTED.

Two Colored Pullman Sleeper Porters
Thought to Have Mrs.
Klein's Lost Rings.

Frank Smith and Charles Harrot, colored porters on Pullman sleepers, were arrested today while trying to pawn a diamond and a topaz ring in an Eighth avenue shop. Looking up their lists of stolen property Detectives Doyle and Charlton found that the rings answered the descriptions of two rings stolen in a Pullman car on Sept. 15.

On that day Mrs. E. L. Klein, of Harrisburg, Pa., was traveling from her home to Indianapolis in a Pullman and left two rings worth $250 on the washstand in the dressing-room. When she returned for them they were gone. An agent for the Pullman company called at Police Headquarters and said that Smith had been porter on the car that Smith returned to Pennsylvania to answer a charge of grand larceny.

SLEEPERS AWAKENED BY REVOLVER SHOTS

Police Reserves Fire Weapons to Stop Fugitive, and the Neighborhood Is Aroused.

Richard Williams, arraigned in the Eastern Court today on a charge of having robbed Edward Phene in a subway train, has the distinction of having caused more persons to be routed out of their beds early today than are usually attracted by a three-alarm fire.

Twenty policemen, the reserves of the West One Hundredth street station, all took a shot or more in the air or at the ground while chasing Williams, with the result that residents in the neighborhood of the police station rumbled out of bed confident of a battle of some kind was being fought.

Phene and Williams met near the Battery. Phene is from Great Neck, New York and wanted company. He picked up Williams and the pair, after many drinks, boarded a subway train at Seventy-second street when Phene declared Williams had stolen $50 from him.

In the police station, while Sergeant Devery was taking his pedigree, Williams bolted out the door, alarming the face of Knowles, who followed. The fugitive gained several seconds by this and Devery turned out the reserve who turned out in various stages of undress.

Williams bolted to Columbus avenue and up the avenue, with the pack in his hand. Some one fired a shot in the air, and then all cut loose with their revolvers. Williams did not stop, and many fired again and again.

Patrolmen Reardon and Knowles overhauled Williams after a couple of blocks and surrounded by the police. He was marched back to the station. In the meanwhile the streets had filled with persons looking for the dead and wounded.

At the police station Williams, it is said, admitted the theft of the money. Seventy-four dollars was found hidden in his underclothing. He said he was a horse dealer, of No. 158 Lexington avenue.

Williams will be shown up at Police Headquarters to-day on the charge of the arrest of interfering with a policeman. Arnold turned out with only one shoe on. Williams thought it was so funny he stopped the policeman to make him tell where the other shoe was.

SAY HE'S A FORGER.

Clerk Brought from Philadelphia on Several Charges.

Detective-Sergeant Frank Price, of the Central Office, returned from Philadelphia today with Charles J. Muntwyler, a young clerk, of No. 232 East Eighty-fourth street, who is wanted, the police say, for forgery.

Muntwyler, they charge, was a member of a gang that obtained a large sum of money by forging the signatures of well-known people. Among the victims were George M. Cohan, the actor, and John A. Drake, a wealthy horseman.

"I'M NOT A PATTI, BUT I CAN SING"

So Pleads Warbler of Lullabies
Who Neighbors Say
Annoys Her.

Mrs. Fannie Morrison, music teacher, on the first floor, complains that Mrs. Rose Vergelichish, her neighbor two floors above, at No. 141 Fifth avenue, systematically annoys her. In Harlem Police Court today the charge was heard. She said it was impossible for her to teach the harmonies to her pupils.

"Your Honor," said Mrs. Morrison to Magistrate Baker, "my neighbor has children. She thinks I complained to the Gerry Society about her. I didn't, but when I am teaching harmony to my pupils she strikes her head out of her window and makes a discord by singing improvised nursery rhymes with my name in every other line. She sings my name from early morning till after bedtime, quite distracting to me and to my pupils. Besides, she and her friends hold a series of root root stomp, and I have to huddle over them when I want to go in or out."

"What have you to say?" the Magistrate asked of the discordant one.

"I guess I have a right to sing my Sewing Machines.

Offered in a Club in payments of $1 down and $1 weekly until you have paid us $23.75.

Forget for a moment the cheap type of machines to be had in the market for most any price you care to pay. Think only of the highest grade ones—the kinds most universally known—and you'll be in the company of the "Monarch."

But to buy a "Monarch" at $23.75, instead of anywhere from $40 to $60—that's our argument to-day, and a mighty good one it is.

Only one way is the price possible—by the formation of a club, in which we are now enrolling members. You pay us $1 on joining and the balance in monthly payments of $1 until the $23.75 has been paid.

The picture illustrates the machine. You recognize it at once as a type which under its own name is the most widely known in America.

Solid oak case, Colonial style. Made in the drop-head construction, so that you have a table top when closed, all working parts being concealed. Improved lockstitch has positive feed, self-threading shuttle, automatic bobbin winder.

Full Ball Bearing: A machine any little child can operate, because of its easy motion; still-running, and we attend to that part of it.

If this week's exposition of Fall and Winter Apparel has helped you to a knowledge of what is best in style—and the place to secure it—it has served its purpose.
